

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Acknowledgments
Archives and libraries visited
Sources and abbreviations
Introduction, chapter summary and definitions

PART I: ORIGINS AND AESTHETICS OF THE EARLY WAR FILM

Chapter 1. Representing war in the nineteenth century: artists, photographers, and the changing battlefield

- i. Introduction
- ii. Traditional warfare as visual spectacle
- iii. A new kind of 'invisible' war
- iv. Representing the new warfare
- v. Notes

Chapter 2. Early cinema and news of war: authenticity, artifice and deception

- i. Introduction
- ii. The early war film: context & development
- iii. Actualities
- iv. Staged films, including fakes
- v. Deception of various kinds
- vi. The fate of fakes
- vii. Notes

PART II: WAR CORRESPONDENTS AS FILMMAKERS

Chapter 3. The Greco-Turkish War (1897) – The first war to be filmed and faked

- i. Introduction
- ii. Filming the war: Frederic Villiers
- iii. Faking the war: Georges Méliès
- iv. Issues of deception
- v. Conclusion: the origin of the war film
- vi. Notes

Chapter 4. The Battle of Omdurman (1898) – Moving images of a British victory

- i. Introduction
- ii. Correspondent cameramen: Villiers et al
- iii. Celebrating victory in the British media
- iv. War-related films
- v. Conclusion
- vi. Notes

PART III: AMERICA'S WARS IN CUBA AND THE PHILIPPINES

Chapter 5. The Spanish-American War (1898) – I. Filming for a visual newspaper

- i. Introduction. Historical background
- ii. The war and the media
- iii. Filming the war
- iv. Biograph's cameramen: Arthur Marvin and Billy Bitzer
- v. Edison's cameraman: William Paley
- vi. Conclusion: The war, the cinema and the press
- vii. Notes

Chapter 6. The Spanish-American War – II: Re-staging a war for the moving pictures

- i. Introduction
- ii. Symbolic and flag films
- iii. Staged re-enactments with actors
- iv. Staged re-enactments with scale-models
- v. Conclusion : Staging, symbolism and the press
- vi. Notes

Chapter 7. The Spanish-American War – III: America's war on screen

- i. Introduction
- ii. War and the performance media
- iii. Film exhibition in America
- iv. Film exhibition in other countries
- v. Film exhibition in Spain
- vi. Conclusion: The film industry marches on
- vii. Notes

Chapter 8. The Philippine War (1899-1902): moving pictures for the American military

- i. Introduction
- ii. Filming the war: Holmes, Rosenthal et al
- iii. The first 'embedded' cameraman: C. Fred Ackerman
- iv. 'Routing the Filipinos': staging and exhibition
- v. Conclusion
- vi. Notes

PART IV: THE BOER AND BOXER CONFLICTS

Chapter 9. The Boer War (1899-1902) – I. The emergence of professional cameramen

- i. Introduction
- ii. The amateurs: 1. Bull, Underwood, Beevor and Noble
- iii. The amateurs: 2. Benett-Stanford, Hyman and Goldman
- iv. The professionals: 1. Dickson's Biograph in battle
- v. The professionals: 2. Joe Rosenthal for Warwick
- vi. Conclusion
- vii. Notes

Chapter 10. The Boer War – II. Staged scenes of British heroism

- i. Introduction
- ii. British staged films
- iii. Staged films made in other countries
- iv. Conclusion
- v. Notes

Chapter 11. The Boer War – III. Different audiences; different attitudes

- i. Introduction
- ii. Exhibiting Boer War films in Britain
- iii. Exhibiting Boer War films outside Britain
- iv. Conclusion: The power of film
- v. Notes

Chapter 12. The Boxer Uprising (1900) – I. Filming with the Allied Armies

- i. Introduction
- ii. Films of China and the troops
- iii. Cameramen with the allies
- iv. Embedded again: C. Fred Ackerman
- v. Conclusion
- vi. Notes

Chapter 13. The Boxer Uprising – II. Denigrating the Chinese on screen

- i. Introduction
- ii. 'Exciting and interesting': faked war films
- iii. Boxer allegories: Méliès and others
- iv. Exhibition of Boxer Uprising films
- v. Conclusion: filmic prejudice?
- vi. Notes

PART V: CONCLUSION and APPENDICES

Chapter 14. The aesthetic and political legacies of the early war film

- i. Pioneering film propaganda
- ii. War and the rise of cinema
- iii. Notes

APPENDICES [only on CD version]

- i. Deception in nineteenth century war photography
- ii. Telephoto lenses and early war filming
- iii. Ackerman's films in the Philippines and China – filmography
- iv. Winston Churchill's plan to film the Boer War
- v. Boer War celebrities on screen
- vi. 'Horror and carnage': opposition to filming early warfare
- vii. Notes to appendices