"I thank you most sincerely for all your assistance;
& whether or no my Book may be wretched
you have done your best to make it less wretched."
Charles Darwin (in a letter to John Hooper)

During the four years in which I did research at Utrecht University, many people contributed in some way to the realization of this thesis. I would like to thank them all for their support and cooperation.

In particular, I would like to thank my co-promotor, Gert de Lange, and my promotor, Kees van der Weijden, for initiating this research, and for their trust in me. They gave me the opportunity and the freedom to explore marine geosciences, and to perform my own research.

Palaeoceanographic research implies cooperation with people from many disciplines. This is the part of my work which I most enjoyed. I would like to thank Julia Becker, Hendrik-Jan Bosch, Hans-Jürgen Brumsack, Frits Hilgen, Gert de Lange, Jan de Leeuw, Lucas Lourens, Hilde Passier, Sjoerd Schenau, Jaap Sinninghe Damsté, Kees van der Weijden and Jan-Willem Zachariasse for their stimulating ideas and constructive criticism.

Analytical assistance has been indispensable for this research: I would not have been able to analyse all 2,000 samples by ICP-AES, Zeeman-AAS, hydride-AAS, XRF, XRD, CNS-analyser and SIRA myself. Therefore, I would like to thank Mark van Alphen, Paul Anten, Arnold van Dijk, Dineke van de Meent, Gijs Nobbe, Helen de Waard and Ton Zalm for their help.

No-one lives by science alone. For the pleasant times I have enjoyed at the Institute for Earth Sciences in Utrecht, at international conferences and courses, and during field trips, I would like to thank my roommates (Sjoerd Schenau, Hilde Passier and Gernot Nehrke), all my colleagues and all my international friends (including the full Mercator community!).

My family and friends helped me to stay in touch with the "real world". I am very grateful for their interest in my work, and for the good times we have shared so far. Special thanks are due to my parents, for their love, attention, interest and continuous support.
